THE HERO OF QUEBEC, SARA-TOGA AND COWPENS.

in, as second-class matter.]

To the Editor of the Alexandria Gazette: For the information of an inquirer in your paper and for others as well. I have to state that the hero of Quebec, Saratoga and Cowpens, alluded to in my historic paper on "Washington's Mill at Epsewasson" was no other person than Daniel Morgan, the "wagon boy" of the Occoquan river, which divides the counties of Fairfax and Prince William, Va. This boy in 1754, then hardly twenty years of age, having, by dint of frugal savings from his hirings as a farm laborer in preceding years acquired enough cash to bny a wagon and horses, was in the employ of John Ballandine, an extensive iron manufacturer, hauling iron ore to one of his furnaces for the compensation of a few -hillings a day. This furnace was situated on the Occoquan just above the upper bridge and Jann y's flour mills. A portion of the walls of it are yet standing, a mute but very suggestive memorial of the man whose prominent services as a patriot, as an intrepid leador and as a successful soldier in the great struggle for American independence the gratitude of this generation and the generations which preceded it have been very slow to adequately es-with grass and struggling vines lie scattred around the old walls under he towering granite cliff in the dell so beautiful, close by the dashing waters which came down from the famous fields of Manassas, the party of the historic picnic of the seventh of August last chose as a most fi ting place to spread out and ei jy their noonday repast, just as the "waron boy" had done many a time nearly a hundred and fifty years before.

In the spring of 1755 when all of that region was rife with war's alarm preceding the disastrous French and Indan conflicts, when the drum and fife of the recruiting sergeant was heard amid the wilds, calling for volunteers came up with showy retinue and dashing red coated guards in the vice regal the Occuquan by the Colchester ferry going to Alexandris, the newly founded town of a few hundred inhabitants, to attend the council of war, Morgan's dventurous spirit caught the military enthusiasm of the times and forgetting ore and furnace turned his horse's head in the same direction to join the expedition of British regulars and provincial volunteers then making ready to start for the mountains to engage the French and Indian forces. He offered his team to Braddock's quartermaster to haul up upplies through the wilderness counry for the troops. His offer was accepted and in brief time the wagon boy was made master of the entire wagon train in which capacity he displayed so much ability and tact, and especially after the disastrous battle on the Monongahela in directing the carrying off of the wounded from the field, that he was recognized by Colonel Washington as a fit person for promotion to higher grades of service which in due time fol-

Of the future brilliant career of Daniel Morgan as a fighter in the suc-ceeding frontier Indian wars-of his part in the Arnold expedition to Queoec in 1775 and of his marvelous ex-ploits at Saratoga, Cowpens, and other places during the Revolution which won for him the rank of major general in the continental army the writer has endeavored to give a general account in his "History of Colchester" and his "Hero of five wars," both of which are as yet unpublished.

Washington early took Morgan into his confidence and always trusted him implicitly through the years of revolu-tionary struggle; for he knew he was as true as the magnet to the pole. Like Greene and Starke and Putnam his integrity was as a rock. Gates and Arnold and Lee had each approached him in his own ambitious interests prejudicial to the commander in-chief, but he sternly rebuked their treachery with merited scorn. Lafayette set great value on the services of Morgan and loved him as a brother, as his cumerous letters to him show. His exploits were gezetted in his own country and in Europe, they were the theme of praise in Congress, in the French chamber of deputies and even in the British parliament, and General

In this age of monument building. while many a man with not a tithe of bis claims to a nation's gratitude lies under costly and showy memorials of bronze or marble, the poor and friendless wagon boy of the Occoquan who "out of due time" in the order of God's appointing came to be the invincible soldier, the self-sacrificing patriot and one of the nation's law-givers has only an obscure grave and an unpretentious stone to mark the place of his sepulture. But his time is coming. Investigation is at length getting down to the plain facts of the revolutionary struggle, and carefully scrutinizing the motives and actions of its military commanders; and while it is bringing more and more into unfavorable light the intrigues of Gates, Arnold and Lee it is making appear more brilliant and unselfish the record of Morgan, and assuredly its righteous verdict will assign him his true place in our annals; and through the laudable efforts of the "Daughters and Sons of the Revolution" make possible the building of his fitting mon-

The name of General Daniel Morgan is not down in the books of "famous lineage," nor is it inscribed on any roll of Battle Abbey. His cost of arms is not emblezoned in any book of heraldry. No need to search through long lines of ancestry to discover the beginnings of his house. He himself was the founder, its maker and builder. Nothing of its renown and splendor did he borrow from princes of the blood or knights of crusade. He belonged to the mighty army of honest toilers as his ancestors had before him. He believed in the dignity of labor, and he dignified and honored it by a life time of noble service The hand with which he drew his sword in his country's cause was calloused by wielding the axe and driving the plow and wagon; and if I were one of his descendants I would rather have quartered on my coat of arms these embleme of honest toil than all the crouching or rampant lions of the Plantagenets, Tudors or Stuarts. As he was born a soldier so was he born a nobleman, one of nature's best; and no kingly sword ever laid on shoulder of knight mid blare of trumpet and show of royal pomp could have added a degree to his nobility.

Robbed the Grave. A starting incident of which Mr John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is parrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite-gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of nother victim" No one from among the pioneers; and General Braddock and Governor Dinwiddie should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at E. L. Allen's Drug Store

To MERCHANTS.—The holiday is fast approaching and shoppers are already busying themselves as to what and where to buy. Of course they have recourse to the columns of the Gazette as a guide, and those merchants who, through their advertisements, keep the public advised as to what they have to sell usually resp the reward. No better advertising medium than the Gazette can be had. It is uni versally read in this city and in the counties whose people trade in Alexandria and those people have for gen erations consulted its columns for information of all kinds.

It is easy to catch a cold and just as easy to at is easy to carch a cold and just as easy to get rid of it if you commence early to use One Minute Cough Cure. It cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia and all throat and lung troubles. It is pleasant to take, safe to use and sure to cure. Charles G Lennon.
